Reviews

It is one of my personal favorite books. It is written in easy terms and never hard to understand. It has been designed in an exceedingly easy way and it is only after I finished reading this publication that I in fact changed me, changed the way I think.

Program to the Former Soviet Union FSU conducts day-to-day governmentwide business concerning issues. At key points, it has taken the lead in the interagency coordination process. For instance, the Directorate took the lead in an ad hoc group that put together the package of U. S. assistance first presented at the 1993 Tokyo Economic Summit. The Directorate's Senior Staff Director is the vice-chair of the Policy Steering Group and of the Assistance Coordination Group. The Directorate also convenes other interagency bodies such as the Directorate NSC Safety, Security, and Dismantlement Working Group. (The provides some staff support for U. S. members of the Gore-Chernomyrdin Commission, and is itself a coordination mechanism.) The Assistance Coordination Group received its charter from the National The Coordinator and the Security Advisor, and reports to the Policy Steering Group. It includes Assistance Coordination FSU representatives of agencies expending funds in the. The State Group Department Coordinator, appointed pursuant to the Freedom Support Act, chairs the Assistance Coordination Group. The group ordinarily meets every 2 weeks. The Assistance Coordination Group has sectoral working groups that report either to the Coordinator directly or to the Assistance Coordination Group. Staff from the Coordinators Office either chair the sectoral working groups or participate in them. The sectoral working groups are usually focused on some sector or area of activity such as the energy sector or democratization. Agencies working in a sector, or that have an interest in the sector, usually send representatives to the...
