If our associations are reliable, the life of our race began in a climate producing all that was needful for animal sustenance without mans care. Yet, in that position, man never rose, - he lived in a barbarous state, browsing in the primitive pastures of animal life. Much like the animal he lived and slept; and sleeping, sometimes dreaming; but he awaketh, and his soul is empty; he is faint, and his soul hath appetite. Then began the original purposes of mans nature; then commenced the stir of human faculties. The breadth of his nature began to work; he feels the stir of impassioned endeavor; - he begins to think - to philosophize - he sees grand fields of opportunity, and hears the command, till those acres, and soon perceives that by applying his own intelligence...
