Reviews

This pdf is definitely not easy to get started on studying but quite entertaining to read through. I am quite late in start reading this one, but better then never. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

Through an accident in the laboratory, the sample of juices were mixed, which vitiated the accuracy of results, hence no table is given for 1888 corresponding to Table No. 6 for 1887. In 1887, two stalks and a lap gave the largest net yields, both with cane from plant and stubble. It was also shown that, contrary to expectation, the stubble seed gave slightly superior result, both in tonnage and sugar content. In 1887, the uncut cane proved the equal for seed with that cut in the usual way. In 1888, it is difficult to draw a conclusion as to the uumber of stalks to plant in order to secure a maximum stubble crop. It confirms the result heretofore obtained, that the original sprouts and the suckers produce stubble equally as well. This is shown by the fact that Experiment No. 4, where last year 60 per cent, of the harvested cane was original sprouts, both with plant and stubble for seed, gave this year larger results than No. 1, where the sprouts constituted less than 25 per cent. It is not, then, the suckers only which give the stubble of next year. Here, also, is shown again that the upper part.of the cane is as good (and perhaps better) as any other portion, for seed. The stubble from stubble seed shows a slight superiority to that from plant seed. PHYSIOLOGICAL EXPERIMENTS. The question of the influence of suckers upon cane...
